CELEBRATING 30 YEARS OF THE ZARROW MENTAL HEALTH SYMPOSIUM

CONFERENCE OVERVIEW

So often a line is drawn between our physical health and our mental health, and yet our brain and our body are one. What impacts one influences the other. From the moment of conception to our final breath, everything from our genetics and family history to our age, lived experiences, and environment can play a role in our overall well-being and how we languish or thrive. As we work toward resilience, wellness and recovery, how do we address life stressors, both physical and emotional, and environmental? What have we learned about natural, systemic and community supports? And how do we as individuals, families, caregivers, organizations, and communities respond to meet the needs of those impacted by mental illness across the lifespan, as well as focus upstream on prevention?

Join us this September as we celebrate the 30th Anniversary of the Zarrow Mental Health Symposium and examine Life Stages: Mental Health Across a Lifetime. We'll explore evolutionary research, innovative programs, promising practices, creative collaborations and outside-the-box thinking to address the needs of individuals and families, as well as influence more dynamic and coordinated systems.

The conference, which historically draws over 800 participants from across the country, will again be offered in a 100% virtual format over three days. Participants will explore best practices, emerging knowledge, innovative programs, and collaborations to bring mental health treatment, systems, and support to the forefront.
